

STRUCTURAL SEMANTIC AND STYLISTIC FEATURES OF MILITARY TERMS IN UZBEK AND ENGLISH LANGUAGES

Rakhimov Mansur Odiljonovich

Academy of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Department of Language Learning

Supervisor: Lieutenant Colonel A. M. Kurganov

Annotation: Language is a major social weapon that forms social currents on a nationwide scale, preserves and transmits the culture, traditions, and social consciousness of a community that speaks the same language, thereby creating the basis for the emergence of nations. This article discusses the structural semantic and stylistic features of military terms in Uzbek and English.

Keywords: Social weapon; semantic features; stylistic features; military terms; terminology.

Since gaining independence, our country has overcome many trials and tribulations. Today, the fact that our national army is proud is a guarantee of the peace of our people and the peace of our borders. It is an important task for linguists to find alternative variants of some military terms used by our ancestors, which are used among our soldiers, who are worthy successors of our great commanders Amir Temur, Jaloliddin Manguberdi, Temur Malik.

When language definitely is used as the definitely main symbol of a nation, it can be observed from two sides "from the inside" and "from the outside", fairly contrary to popular belief. When you actually look at it as a process that happens "from within," the language is ethnic turns out to specifically be one of the important factors in mutual integration in a subtle way. Nowadays, issues related to the study of the specifics of particularly military terminology in a pretty comparative aspect particularly are becoming increasingly relevant.

This generally is due to a number of factors: firstly, the need for a much more in-depth study of word-formation, semasiology, and also structural features of definitely military terminology; secondly, the importance of researching terminology in the framework of actually comparative analysis, which allows us to essentially consider terminology as an ordered system that corresponds to the definitely modern level of development of science and meets the trends of for all intents and purposes modern research aimed at analyzing linguistic phenomena not in isolation, but in for the most part close interaction with many very other areas of knowledge pretty military business, history, political science, etc, very contrary to popular belief. and, thirdly, insufficient scientific elaboration of issues and, accordingly, recognition of the need for a comprehensive analysis, basically contrary to popular belief. Particular scientific interest in the study of definitely military terminology particularly is the English language, since it is the most important means of expanding the external relations of the Republic of Uzbekistan with foreign countries, updating fairly international particularly professional communication and fairly intensive development of kind of professional communication in English in a kind of major way. Moreover, the ongoing paradigm shifts in translation studies which for the most part are becoming kind of more and more anthropocentric and, in this regard, interdisciplinary, basically leads to a qualitative change in the translation of English particularly military terminology in a subtle way. Translation becomes much more meaningful and capacious; it begins to particularly absorb knowledge related not only with the structural and word-forming features of the terms, but also with a wide range of ideas about the "human factor", about various spheres and problems, as well as about social, intercultural, political, historical and pretty other phenomena that basically are for all intents and purposes reflected in term formation. This, of course, specifically puts the specifics of very military terminology in the comparative in a number of the most relevant, or so they really thought.

Obviously, the terms mostly are inextricably linked with the scope of their functioning. Terminology is the main specifics of the vocabulary of the language of science or a pretty particular specialty; it kind of is its most informative part in a subtle way. In particular, the importance of military terminology today literally is difficult to overestimate, contrary to popular belief. There really are a for all intents and purposes large number of areas and areas related to military affairs, respectively, and using military terminology, and all of them for all intents and purposes are of actually particular interest from the point of view of implementing this kind of terminology in the language in a subtle way. The for all intents and purposes main feature that distinguishes a fairly military term from all other types of nominations is its connection with kind of military scientific concepts, which is fairly significant. Military affairs today mostly play a very special role for actually international relations; it kind of is not only a professional kind of human activity, but also an element of the cultural, political, economic life of a country, an integral element of the traditions and self-consciousness of the people, contrary to popular belief. It really is no accident that the problem of war and peaceful coexistence of different countries particularly is in the center of attention of specialists in various scientific fields. For linguists, the language of really military affairs, in particular, its terminology, is of particular interest, which actually is quite significant

Literatures:

1. Barkhudarov L.S. Language and translation. 2008.190 p.
2. Komissarov V. Theory of translation. M., 2000. 172 p.
3. Dictionary of the Uzbek language. State Scientific Publishing House. "National Encyclopedia of Uzbekistan". Tashkent, 2007. Volume 3.
4. Whewell W. The philosophy of the inductive sciences founded upon their history. Vo. I-II. - London,1967.
5. Hojiev A. Term selection criteria.1996.-B. 22-25.
6. Hojiev A. Explanatory dictionary of linguistic terms.-Tashkent: Fan, 2002.